

Creating a Brighter Future for Children with Cardiomyopathy

The Children's Cardiomyopathy Foundation (CCF) is dedicated to finding causes and cures for pediatric cardiomyopathy through the support of research, education, awareness, and advocacy.

Since 2002, CCF has been assisting physicians and families in their quest for earlier diagnosis, improved treatment, and better quality of life for children affected by cardiomyopathy.

A Research Advocate

- Fund research studies through grant programs with the American Heart Association and American Academy of Pediatrics
- Sponsor scientific conferences and working groups
- Support multi-center studies by the Pediatric Cardiomyopathy Registry
- Advocate for increased Federal research funding

An Invaluable Resource

- Offer support services such as family matching, teen programs, Q&A sessions, webinars, and an online community
- Serve as an access point for information on the disease
- Assist families in locating a specialty center and care provider
- Provide financial assistance on cardiomyopathy-related expenses to qualifying families
